Questions

1. You are a shopkeeper who sells laptops. The sales are down from the last few weeks. The festive seasons such as Dussehra & Diwali are around the corner. You must design a sales strategy to boost your sales for the upcoming festive season.

ANS: If was the shopkeeper, then I would have made an offer of giving gadgets such a mouse, keyboard, headphone free with a new laptop they purchased. But the gadgets offered will depend on the price of laptop.
Ex- if the laptop price is low then the gadget offered will be of low price such as a mouse. And similarly the gadgets will be increased as per the price of laptop.
Let's assume, if a laptop has a MRP of 45k and its profit is 2% that is ₹900 than a mouse of ₹250 wouldn't be a bad idea to offer as free. And we can sell the laptop by increasing one percent than MRP i.e ₹49,450.
Similarly for a laptop of MRP 70k we will offer a headphone of ₹1000. Accordingly we will have diverse offers according to the price segment of laptops.
And at last we will provide extra warranty of 6 months along with the provided warranty for the free gadgets/devices.
This will attract more customers and make them excited.

2. You have recently started a new coaching class, but you have one of the most prestigious coaching classes already running in your city. Design a solution to attract & convince more students to join your coaching class rather than the renowned one in your city?

ANS: If I was in the given situation, I would have offered students for a free tutorial for one month and then I would have registered them. And again I would have offered 7% off in fees if they pay for 6 month at once and 15 % for those who paid for whole year at once.

Apart from all these I would also work on My teaching methods as a usual teacher does and also i'll have a daily revision session in between the tutorial hours. This is not provided by most tutorials. So This will attract the students to try and join atleast once for a month.

3. Who do you think is the best: Zomato or Swiggy & why?

ANS: I personally prefer ordering from Swiggy and no, I am not saying this because of the recent event that unfolded, I have been ordering food online since 2016 and have preferred Swiggy over Zomato always Swiggy is more efficient, especially because of the simple UI of the mobile app I feel. There are a plethora of eating options on Swiggy, the number of restaurants listed is a lot more compared to Zomato, whose UI is a bit congested according to me. Plus, Swiggy comes with a lot of filters like Veg Only, Pocket Friendly, Mealbox options, Newly Launched etc. Also, the offers are comparatively a lot economical on Swiggy. Coming to Zomato, I feel they surcharge on delivery and packing. I had tried comparing two restaurants once on both Swiggy and Zomato. Even though the prices of the items were similar on both the apps, Zomato included a delivery fee of 35 rupees and the packing charges for them were a lot more compared to what Swiggy was charging. So whenever I order food, I usually do it from Swiggy.

But at the same time, if I am planning to go out to try some restaurant, I check the reviews and photos on Zomato. If I wish to make a table reservation, and if there are no offers on Dineout, I reserve my table from the Zomato app only. Another thing that I had noticed is the time of the delivery. I have ordered via Zomato only a few times and the deliveries are often late. With Swiggy, the orders are on time almost every time but with Zomato it has been never the case, at least with me.

4. Joining an early stage startup like Edu-versity means exponential learning and growth with aggressive work. Why do you want to join us?

ANS: I am delighted to join the Edu-versity as it aligns well with my passion for learning and innovation. The early career opportunities provide a unique environment where I can be productive and grow rapidly in the company. I want to be part of a team that creates the future of education, pushes boundaries and responds to challenges with creativity and innovation. The prospect of exponential learning and the opportunity to make a real impact in such an environment is incredibly inspiring. Additionally, I thrive in an environment that requires flexibility and the opportunity to multitask, which is often the case in early career startups.
